Sarah Keebler is an associate on Godfrey & Kahn's Litigation team and a member of the Labor & Employment Litigation practice. Sarah litigates a variety of complex commercial disputes, including breach of contract actions and business torts.

Sarah maintains an active employment litigation practice. Sarah represents employers in federal and state courts, as well as administrative agencies. She defends wage-and-hour class and collective actions and discrimination, harassment, and retaliation claims. Sarah also litigates disputes regarding restrictive covenants and trade secrets.

Prior to joining Godfrey & Kahn, Sarah was a Judicial Intern for the Wisconsin Court of Appeals. While in law school, Sarah served as a Comment Editor for the Marquette Law Review. Sarah also served as a leader for Marquette University Law School's Academic Success Program and volunteered with the Law and Entrepreneurship Clinic, where she worked directly with entrepreneurs and small businesses.
