Meg is a shareholder and chair of Godfrey & Kahn's Labor & Employment Practice Group. Meg assists clients with the management of day-to-day employment matters, drafting and enforcing restrictive covenant agreements, administering family and medical leave laws, advising on federal and state discrimination claims, conducting unlawful harassment investigations, and drafting affirmative action plans.

Meg also counsels clients regarding the employment and labor matters that are related to business sales, mergers and acquisitions, and other corporate restructuring, including employment and labor due diligence, employee selection and retention, employment agreements, and reduction-in-force issues. In addition, Meg counsels employers on international employment and business issues.

Meg regularly conducts workshops and seminars on employment law topics for clients and other employment law professionals and is a frequent contributor to Godfrey & Kahn's legal employment blog, All in a Day's Work.
