Aly is an attorney in the Milwaukee office and a member of the firm's Corporate practice. She represents privately held businesses, investors and strategic buyers in a variety of transactional and general corporate matters, with a particular emphasis on middle-market M&A transactions.

Her practice includes assisting clients with acquisitions, divestitures and other strategic transactions involving asset purchases, stock purchases and mergers. Aly has experience coordinating and conducting corporate due diligence reviews, helping clients identify and evaluate legal risks, organize transaction workflows and move deals efficiently toward closing. She is committed to providing practical, detail-oriented support throughout the transaction process and works collaboratively with clients and deal teams from the initial stages of a transaction through post-closing matters. She also counsels clients on corporate governance, commercial contracting and other general business matters.

While in law school, Aly served as the Managing Editor for The Corporate and Business Law Journal. She gained practical experience during law school through her work with the Small Business and Entrepreneurship Clinic, where she assisted start-up companies in addressing a range of legal challenges related to establishing and operating their businesses.
