Litigation

Brenda Sweeney is a paralegal in the Litigation Practice Group of the firm's Milwaukee office and has been with the firm since 2003. She has assisted attorneys on a wide variety of complex litigation matters, including commercial disputes, securities, banking, class actions, insurance coverage, dealership and trade regulations, corporate and partnership control and succession, taxation, environmental law, business torts, estates and trusts, constitutional law, construction disputes, intellectual property, business fraud, sale of business, distributor relations, labor and employment, unfair competition, and shareholder disputes. Brenda assists in all phases of litigation including input, discovery, case management and organization, fact investigation, and legal research. She is conversant with traditional and electronic filing at the trial and appellate levels of both state and federal courts, and is particularly experienced in the preparation, assembly, and filing of appellate briefs and appendices.
